

Emily Bradfield (UK)

Emily Bradfield, PhD, is a Practitioner Research Associate: Collections & Wellbeing at The Fitzwilliam Museum (University of Cambridge). She has worked in the interdisciplinary fields of arts and health; and creative ageing since 2016, most recently leading Arts and Minds, a small, Cambridge-based arts and health charity (2019 - 2023). Emily holds a PhD in Creative Ageing (University of Derby) and an MSc in Cultural Events Management (De Montfort University). She founded the British Society of Gerontology's Creative Ageing Special Interest Group in 2019, and is a member of the Arts Health Early Career Research Network. She also works as an Independent Consultant supporting people to reimagine evaluation. Emily has a book chapter on Creative Ageing: The Social Policy Challenge in Creativity in Later Life: Beyond Late Style (Amigoni and McMullan, 2019); and published Subjective experiences of participatory arts engagement of healthy older people and explorations of creative ageing in a special issue on Arts, Creativity and Health (Public Health, 2021).